Road and transportation are now an essential component of every human being in the modern world. In some way or another, everyone uses the roads. Although the current transportation system has reduced travel times, it has also increased the chance of fatalities. Road accidents claim thousands of lives each year and seriously hurt millions more.

Road accidents claim the lives of over 80,000 people in India alone each year, accounting for 13% of all global fatalities. The driver's gender is a significant factor in the majority of collisions. Most often, accidents happen as a result of a road user's negligence or lack of awareness about road safety. On the basis of that two students from N.C College were found accidental death on the way when they returned from college to home. Ptharkandi College community has organised a condolence programme for their death in the college premises. Dr. Monjurul Hoque, Principal, Patharkandi College urged the students and other staffs to be more alert while in driving and always be conscious in passenger vehicle.
